

Notes on contributors / Biobibliographies

---

ÉRIC FORGUES received his doctorate degree in Sociology from Université de Montréal. His thesis subject was on the role of the state in the economic development of Francophones in Quebec. Since 1998, he has carried out research at the Université de Moncton on community development, health and welfare, as well as regional and sustainable development. He has taught at the Université de Moncton in sociology and environmental studies. He has also served as innovation officer at the Bureau de soutien à l'innovation (Innovation Support Office) of Université de Moncton and is an associate researcher at the Département de sociologie (Sociology Department) since 2001.

MONIQUE NADEAU-SAUMIER PhD, UQAM., a enseigné l'histoire de l'art à l'Université Bishop's tout en assumant le poste de directrice administrative du Centre de recherche des Cantons-de-l'Est, de 1987 à 1995. Elle est membre associée de l'Institut de recherche en art canadien Gail-et-Stephen-A.-Jarislowsky, Université Concordia.

LOUINE NIWA, BID, NCIDQ, MA Interdisciplinary, MEd in Art, is an artist and designer who supports arts and culture through academic research on the conservation of cultural landscapes. Her life and work experiences across Canada and abroad serve her well in this endeavour. Louine currently resides in Sherbrooke, Quebec, with her family.

LORRAINE O'DONNELL is coordinator-researcher of the Quebec English-Speaking Communities Research Network, a joint initiative of the Canadian Institute for Research on Linguistic Minorities, located in Moncton, and Concordia University's School of Extended Learning. Ms. O'Donnell has a graduate diploma in Community Economic Development and a PhD in History.

EMILY POTTER graduated from Mount Allison University in 2009 with a BA in Art History and in 2011 she completed the Applied Museum Studies program at Algonquin College. Her experience includes work at the Colby-Curtis Museum, the Canadian Museum of Contemporary Photography, and the McIntosh Gallery. She is currently Archivist at the ETRC Archives Department.

MARY RICHARDSON has a PhD in Social and Cultural Anthropology from Université Laval and works at the Institut national de santé publique du Québec. Her research interests range from sustainable community development to alternative food movements and farmer-neighbour relations.

ANNE ROBINEAU received her doctorate degree in Sociology from Université de Montréal. Her thesis subject was on avant-garde music in Quebec. Since 2006, she has carried out research on arts and culture in Francophone minority communities across Canada. She has taught sociology and anthropology at the Collège universitaire de Saint-Boniface (Manitoba) and at the Université de Moncton as a part-time professor. Dr. Robineau joined the CIRML as a researcher in 2008, and will be continuing her research on Francophone artistic communities in New Brunswick and on arts and culture audiences in Francophone minorities. She is also working on cultural vitality of French communities in the Yukon, Northwest Territories and Nunavut.

DUNCAN SANDERSON is a Sociologist (PhD) with extensive experience planning and conducting research projects, and planning and evaluating health programs and services. His research interests include health services for the English-speaking population and issues associated with the implementation of new technology in health services.

ÉRIC SHRAGGE est professeur et directeur de l'École des affaires publiques et communautaires (EAPC) et du Diplôme de 2<sup>e</sup> cycle en Développement économique communautaire de l'EAPC à l'Université Concordia. Il a à son actif plusieurs publications et copublications sur le développement économique communautaire, le programme de travail obligatoire et l'économie sociale. Vivement intéressé aux difficultés rencontrées par les immigrants sur le marché du travail, il préside actuellement le Centre des travailleurs immigrants.

PETER SOUTHAM a enseigné l'histoire du Québec et du Canada à l'Université de Sherbrooke pendant une trentaine d'années. Il s'est intéressé en particulier à l'histoire des Cantons-de-l'Est. Aujourd'hui à la retraite, il est sur le point de publier un ouvrage sur deux cent ans de présence irlandaise dans le Val-Saint-François.

KAREN URTNOWSKI is an Anglophone Quebecer with 25 years of experience in international development and environmental protection in Costa Rica, Guatemala and Haiti, and in refugee protection and immigrant settlement in Canada. She has two Masters degrees, one in Social Work and the other in Environmental Studies.

RICHARD WALLING is the Executive Director of the Jeffery Hale Community Partners, a charitable organization focused on health and social services for the English-speaking minority community in the Quebec City region. He is co-author of The Holland Centre Experience – A Community Development Model for Minorities – I dream.